ABSTRACT

Results are provided of surveys taken during the 1977-78 academic year of all two-year and four-year institutions listed in the "Education Directory 1976/77." Information is presented on: number and location of foreign students, 1954/55-1977/78; distribution of students by type of institution; distribution of foreign students in U.S. by major geographic region; states with most foreign students; institutions with foreign students; distribution of foreign students enrolled in public and private institutions; and distribution of foreign students enrolled in two-year and four-year institutions, 1977-78. Information on the origin of students includes the following: foreign students in U.S. by continent of origin and by continental subregion, foreign students from OPEC, leading countries of origin of foreign students, and percentage of foreign students by institutional type and geographic subregion. Additional characteristics reported include percentage distribution of foreign students by sex and distribution by academic level and fields of study. Graphs are presented and appendices include taxonomies of geographical and field of study data, survey materials including the institutional questionnaire, and foreign student enrollment by institution and by home country. Definitions

Foreign Student

A foreign student has been defined as anyone who is enrolled in courses in the U.S. who is not a citizen or an immigrant (permanent resident). Refugees are included.

F Visa

An F visa is a student visa which may be granted to bona fide students who satisfy requirements for pursuing a full program of study at a U.S. academic institution which admits foreign students, who enter the United States for a temporary stay and solely to study, and who have permanent residence in foreign countries which they have no intention of abandoning.

J Visa

A J visa is an exchange-visitor visa which is used to bring to the United States for a variety of educational purposes students, trainees, teachers, professors, research scholars, international visitors, or professional trainees who are sponsored by an agency or organization which has been approved for sponsorship by the Secretary of State for Exchange Visitor.

Higher Education

In respect to the United States, "Higher Education" is used to describe the group of colleges and universities listed in the Education Directory, Colleges and Universities—1976-1977. Printed by the U.S. Government Printing Office it is National Center for Education Statistics document No. 77-345.

Fields of Study

The fields of study used in this document are those from A Taxonomy of Instructional Programs in Higher Education; also published by the NCES. See Appendix 5 (page 97) for the list of fields.

Regions

The countries and territories included under each major region are listed in Appendix 4 which begins on page 95.

Data Collection

Open Doors 1977/78 reports the results of surveys taken during the 1977-78 academic year of all two- and four-year institutions listed in the Education Directory 1976/77. These surveys were conducted by the Institute of International Education in collaboration with the Joint Task Force on Data Collection, an advisory body comprising representatives of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO), the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs (NAFSA), and IIE. The Task Force was formed in 1974 to help simplify the procedures for acquiring the statistics on foreign students, and it works to collect and report the information and to centralize it for use by governmental and private agencies.

The approach to collection adopted by the Task Force reformed the system utilized by the Institute since the census of foreign students in the United States began in 1919, the year of the Institute's founding. At that time, the Institute and the Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students conducted the survey. In 1948/49, the Institute independently published its results of the census in Education for One World, and, in 1954/55, the results were published in the first Open Doors. During those years, the Institute requested that the foreign student adviser or registrar at each postsecondary institution have each student complete a detailed questionnaire on a precoded form supplied by the Institute. The Institute tabulated and published the results.

The new system utilizes two major steps in its survey. The first step requires completion of a post card which requests only the total number of foreign students enrolled at an institution. (For the purposes of the survey, a foreign student is defined as anyone enrolled for courses in the United States who is neither a U.S. citizen nor an immigrant who will settle permanently in the United States; refugees are considered foreign students.)

The second step consists of a single computer form called an Optical Scanning (OPScan) Form (see Appendix 6). This OPScan Form permits each school to answer the inquiries in a shorter amount of time and has, thereby, increased the number of schools that participated in the survey, by 43.9% in the last year. In addition, the amount of detail reported has also increased. In the last year, for example, it went up by 19% to a question about sex and by 83% to a question about fields of study.

This growth in the rate of responses has significantly improved the percentage of the total population on which specific information is available. This, in turn, has improved the accuracy of the final data. We are, therefore, inclined to treat the figures for 1977/78 as having a higher level of reliability than those for earlier years, but we caution the reader to be continuously aware of sample size and rate of response.

INSTITUTIONS RESPONDING 1954/55-1977/78

Overview of Foreign Study in the United States

The 1977/78 academic year saw a greater return on the foreign student census than ever before; and the return showed more foreign students in U.S. colleges and universities than in years past.

Table 1 shows the responses to the surveys for the last four years and, for purposes of comparison, for 1970/71. The rate of response has risen from 71.1% in 1970/71 and 61.8% in 1974/75 to 89.7% last year. The percentage of institutions which report foreign students has also increased from 64% in 1970/71 and 57% in 1974/75 to 81% in 1977/78.

The institutions' statistics show growth in the foreign student population in U.S. colleges and universities from 118,000 in 1970/71 to 203,000 in 1976/77 to more than 235,000 in the last academic year. This increase reflects both a greater response by academic institutions and a real growth in the number of foreign students. In fact, the number of foreign students per institution has risen from a 1970/71 average of 67.1 to 95.2 in 1977/78.

Table 2 gives the type of responses for the last three years. The total response increased in each of those years. The amount of information, whether supplied as a "detailed response" on an OPScan Form or sent to IIE on an institution's own printout or register, increased in the last year to 50%. It had fallen significantly from over 80% in 1975/76 to under 40% in 1976/77. The number of foreign students in the United States has climbed steadily since 1973 and grown substantially since 1954, as Table 5 on page 3 displays. Foreign student enrollment as a proportion of total enrollment in U.S. colleges and universities has also increased over the years. Table 3 gives the number of U.S. students in institutions of higher education and the number and percentage of foreign students enrolled. Figures from the National Center for Education Statistics show that foreign student enrollment was a larger proportion of total enrollment in 1977/78 than in prior years. The numbers of foreign students at U.S. institutions are growing at a faster rate than the numbers of U.S. students, although foreign students comprise but a small part of total enrollment. While foreign student enrollment accounted for 1.8% of the total student population in 1976/77, it rose to 2.1% the next year. In that period, all enrollment increased by 2.6%, but the foreign student population went up by 16%.

Number and Location

The annual rise in foreign student enrollment during the last three decades is shown in Table 4. The rate of increase varied over the years, in part reflecting the decline in the number of institutions reporting from the mid-sixties to the mid-seventies, which is shown in Table 5. The two-part survey method now in use was introduced in the 1974/75 academic year to correct the lag in reporting.

The primary result was a 40% increase in the number of institutions responding, an increase which has continued although, naturally, at a declining rate as the response rate approaches saturation point—it is now 90%. Similarly, the rate of increase of the number of students reached a high of 24% in 1974/75 and was 16% last year. In 1977/78, of the 2,700 institutions reporting, 2,475 said they had foreign students.

The increase in foreign students reflects not only the improved survey return but also a genuine growth in the number of foreign students. In the last three surveys, the average numbers of students per reporting institution were 79.3, 80.4, and 86.0; at those institutions which say they enroll foreign students, the increase in the average number was from 85.7 in 1975/76 and 88.5 in 1976/77 to 95.1 in 1977/78. This increase is particularly compelling when compared to the 1970/71 average of 67.1.

Most of these students attend public and four-year institutions. Table 6 shows the number and percentage of foreign students in public and private, two- and four-year institutions and, for comparative purposes, the percentage of all students at these institutions. In the ten years from 1968 to 1978, there was a 50% increase in the number of two-year colleges, from 865 to 1,235.

[1] In 1974/75 a simple post card method of obtaining the basic count was adopted and immigrants were excluded.

More and more foreign students are attending two-year institutions each year. Foreign students were first counted in these schools in 1970/71, at which time there were 15,363, 10.6% of all the foreign students on U.S. campuses. In 1977/78, the number had jumped to 37,446—nearly 2½ times more students in just seven years—or 15.9% of all foreign students. This percentage of foreign students is still smaller than the 36% of U.S. students at two-year schools. About two-thirds of foreign students attend public institutions, a smaller percentage than the three-fourths of the U.S. student population.

More than four-fifths of the foreign students are in attendance, in approximately equal proportions, in schools in the Northeast, South, Midwest, and Pacific regions, as Table 7 shows. In the last year there has been a slight decline in the proportion in the South, from 20.9% to 20.2%, and small increases in the other regions. The percentage of students in the Southwest nearly doubled from 1968/69 to 1975/76, from 6.4% to 11.2% of the foreign student population, and to 12.7% the next year. In 1977/78 12.9% of the foreign students were in the Southwest. The Northeast, which had shown a consistent decline in the percentage of students, saw a small increase from 20.3% to 20.5%, but is still behind the 23.8% of 1968/69.

As Table 8 displays, the greatest number of students is in California, 35,367, constituting 15% of all foreign students, the same percentage as in the last census. New York is host to 9.2% of foreign students, a larger percentage than in the last academic year, but fewer than the 13.6% of 1964/65. The top five states comprise 41% of the foreign student population and the top eleven 61.8%, slight increases over the 40.5% and 61.3% of the preceding academic year, but still a smaller percentage than the 43.3% and 63.1% of 1964/65. These proportions indicate that foreign students are dispersing more widely than in years past.

The graph on page 10 displays the variations in percentage share of foreign students in the top eleven states. With some variations, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, the District of Columbia, Massachusetts, and Illinois have had fairly constant positions in the representative years. The number and yearly figures for all states and territories reporting foreign students are shown in Table 9(page 8).

Table 10 lists the U.S. institutions having most foreign students. Once again Miami-Dade Community College, followed by the University of Southern California, reported the largest number of foreign students. Indiana University, Bloomington, moved from 18th, of 1976/77, to 4th, and the University of Houston, Main Campus, dropped in rank from 3rd to 10th. Foreign students comprise nearly one-fifth, 19%, of total enrollment at Howard University, 17% at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and 16.5% at Texas Southern University.

Table 11 lists U.S. institutions with more than 1,000 foreign students in enrollment.

Eleven top states and their percentage share of foreign students

Table 12 lists by type—public, private, two year, four year—the ten institutions most populated by foreign students. One-fourth of all foreign students who attend two-year schools are enrolled in the top twenty institutions, while one-tenth of those in four-year schools go to the top twenty institutions. The top ten private schools enroll one-fifth of the foreign student populations, while the top ten public schools enroll 14%.

While the top institutions constitute a considerable proportion of the total number of foreign students in the country, the proportion is decreasing slightly, as shown in Table 13. Appendix 1 lists the foreign student enrollment at U.S. institutions.

Tables 14 and 15 show the distribution of foreign students in public, private, two- and four-year institutions by state with figures for the percentage of enrollment in the type of institution within each state and its proportion for the nation.

Origin of Students

The 235,509 foreign students in the United States came from more than 175 countries. More than half of the students, 55.6%, were from Asia. A greater number of students came from Iran, 36,000, than from any one other country, and nearly one-third, 31.2%, came from the member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), including the Asian OPEC nations.

Student representation from Asia has been high since at least the academic year 1954/55, when, as reported in the first edition of Open Doors, 14,254 Asian students attended U.S. colleges and universities. Since then, as Table 16 and the accompanying graph show, both the number of students from Asia has increased and the percentage as compared to the total enrollment of foreign students. In 1954/55, 41.7% of foreign students were from Asia, compared with 55.6% in 1977/78. Asian student enrollment in U.S. colleges and universities increased 81.8% from 14,254 to 130,970 in those twenty-four years.

During that time, the number of foreign students from each continent has risen, but the percentage share from three continents has decreased, from 15.2% to 8.2% in Europe, from 23.2% to 16.5% in Latin America, and from 13.8% to 5.5% in North America. The percentage share from Asia has increased, as we have already seen, and it has as well from Africa, from 3.4% to 12.6%.

Table 17, which displays the origin of students by continental subregion, shows an increase in the numbers of foreign students from South West Asia. In 1954/55, 11.9% of the total foreign student population was from South West Asia, while in 1977/78, 24.3% came from that region.

Foreign Students By Continent

Much of that increase is attributable to growth in enrollment from Iran. As Table 18 shows, Iran accounts for 63.3% of the foreign students from South West Asia while the other top four countries of origin from that region together sent an additional 25.6%.

Since 1954/55, Open Doors has reported Iran as one of the ten leading countries of origin of foreign students to the United States, as Tables 19 and 20 document. In that time, however, its percentage share of the total foreign student population has risen substantially, from 2.91% in 1954/55 to 15.4% in 1977/78. In the last academic year its percentage share of student enrollment from the OPEC nations was 49.25%. Table 20 outlines the growth in enrollment of students from the OPEC nations.

The leading countries of origin sent a higher percentage of all foreign students in 1977/78 than in other representative years. Table 21 lists the percentage of enrollment for the leading 5, 10, and 15 countries of origin for 1964/65, 1970/71, 1976/77, and 1977/78. Table 22 lists the countries and territories which sent more than 1,000 students to the United States, and Table 23 compares the numbers of students from the leading countries of origin in the last two academic years.

As Table 19 shows, six of the ten leading countries of origin in 1977/78 were also among the ten leading countries in 1954/55. The four countries not included twenty-four years ago are Nigeria, Hong Kong, Vietnam, and Saudi Arabia. Nigeria became an OPEC nation in 1972 and in 1972/73 was listed for the first time as one of the ten major countries of origin of foreign students; as early as 1963/64, however, it sent more than 1,000 students to the United States.

Hong Kong first entered the top ten list in 1961/62, when it sent 1,597 students to the United States. Prior to that time, fewer than 1,000 students from Hong Kong came to this country each year; in 1964/65, 3,279 came.

Vietnam first sent more than 1,000 students to the United States in 1970/71, when 1,198 students were reported. In 1976/77, with 7,890 students in the United States, it ranked seventh. The increase in attendance is due in part to the end of the war in Vietnam and the increase in refugees to this country. Saudi Arabia ranked among the top ten in 1977/78 for the first time, although ten years ago it first had slightly more than 1,000 students attending schools here.

The four countries which were among the leaders in 1954/55 and are not now are Korea, whose standing fell in 1975/76, although the number of students has increased in the last three years; Mexico, which was not in the top list from 1962/63 through 1973/74 and dropped out again this year; Colombia, which was listed in the top group only in 1954/55 through 1956/57; and the Philippines, which has not been included in the top ranking since 1967/68, but has sent more than 2,000 students to the United States each year since 1962/63.

Four of the OPEC nations, Iran, Nigeria, Venezuela, and Saudi Arabia, are among the top 15 countries of origin. The OPEC nations, as Table 20 shows, sent 31.2% of all the foreign students to the United States; in 1971, they sent 12.4%.

The great majority of foreign students in this country attend four-year colleges and universities, and most are enrolled in public institutions. In the last eight years, however, an increased number of students have been attending two-year colleges. Table 24 gives a breakdown by geographic subregion of enrollment in public and private and two- and four-year institutions. Table 25 provides that information for the top five countries within major regions. A comparatively high percentage of the students

Table 27 shows the distribution of students by their country of origin. A smaller percentage of Iranian students were in the South and Southwest in 1977/78 than in 1976/77, 20.8% and 23% compared to 25% and 26.3%, and more were in the Northeast, 11.5% compared to 7.8%. A shift to the Northeast occurred also with the Chinese; from 29.5% in the Midwest, 17.2% in the Southwest, 18.8% in the South, and 16.3% in the Northeast in 1976/77, institutions reported in 1977/78, respectively, 24.8%, 13.9%, 17.5%, and 20.1%. All of the leading countries of origin showed increases in the Northeast.

Table 28 shows, for the states with the highest enrollment of foreign students, the percentages which have come from the leading countries of origin. Nearly one-fourth, 24.2%, of the students in California are from Japan. More foreign students in New York are from Canada, 14.2%, than from any one other country. In Texas, 13.5% of the students are from Iran, 11.5% are from Venezuela, 11% are from the Republic of China, 10.9% from Hong Kong, and 10.9% from the Republic of Vietnam.

Additional Characteristics

The amount of information supplied by the institutions has increased greatly in the last academic year. Table 29 displays the increase in the level of detail reported on students' characteristics. The response to the field of study question, for example, almost doubled, so that, while the field of study was known for about one in every four students in 1976/77, in 1977/78 it was known for one in two. We recommend, therefore, that any comparison between years be done with respect to the rate of response.

Table 30 shows the distribution of foreign students by sex. The ratio of males to females is fairly consistent at three-to-one regardless of the type of institution. In the last year, the proportion of females decreased in junior colleges from 42.4% to 28.8%.

Table 31 gives the distribution of foreign students by graduate and undergraduate academic level. As in the past three years, undergraduates outnumber graduate students, due primarily to the increased popularity of the junior college. The distribution in 1977/78 is close to that of the mid-1950s and quite different from that of the mid-1960s.

In academic year 1977/78, Engineering continued to be the most popular field of study for foreign students with a 28.8% share of the foreign student population, as Table 32 shows. Business and Management, still the second most popular field, showed an increase of about 14% in actual numbers of students, but actually declined in its share of the total foreign student population. It is also one of only four fields of study which showed an increase in share of total percentages, the other three being Fine and Applied Arts, Agriculture, and Mathematics and Computer Science.

The remaining six fields all posted a decrease in share with two, the Humanities and the Health Professions, also showing a decrease in the actual number of students. (See Appendix 3 for Alternate Breakdown Field of Study.)

Table 33 shows the distribution, in percentages, of fields of study by institution type. For example, 17.7% of all foreign Engineering students were attending two-year colleges. But only 4.6% of those studying the Natural and Life Sciences are in two-year schools. At the same time, private institutions attract about half of all foreign students in the Humanities, but only one-quarter of those in Mathematics and Computer Science.

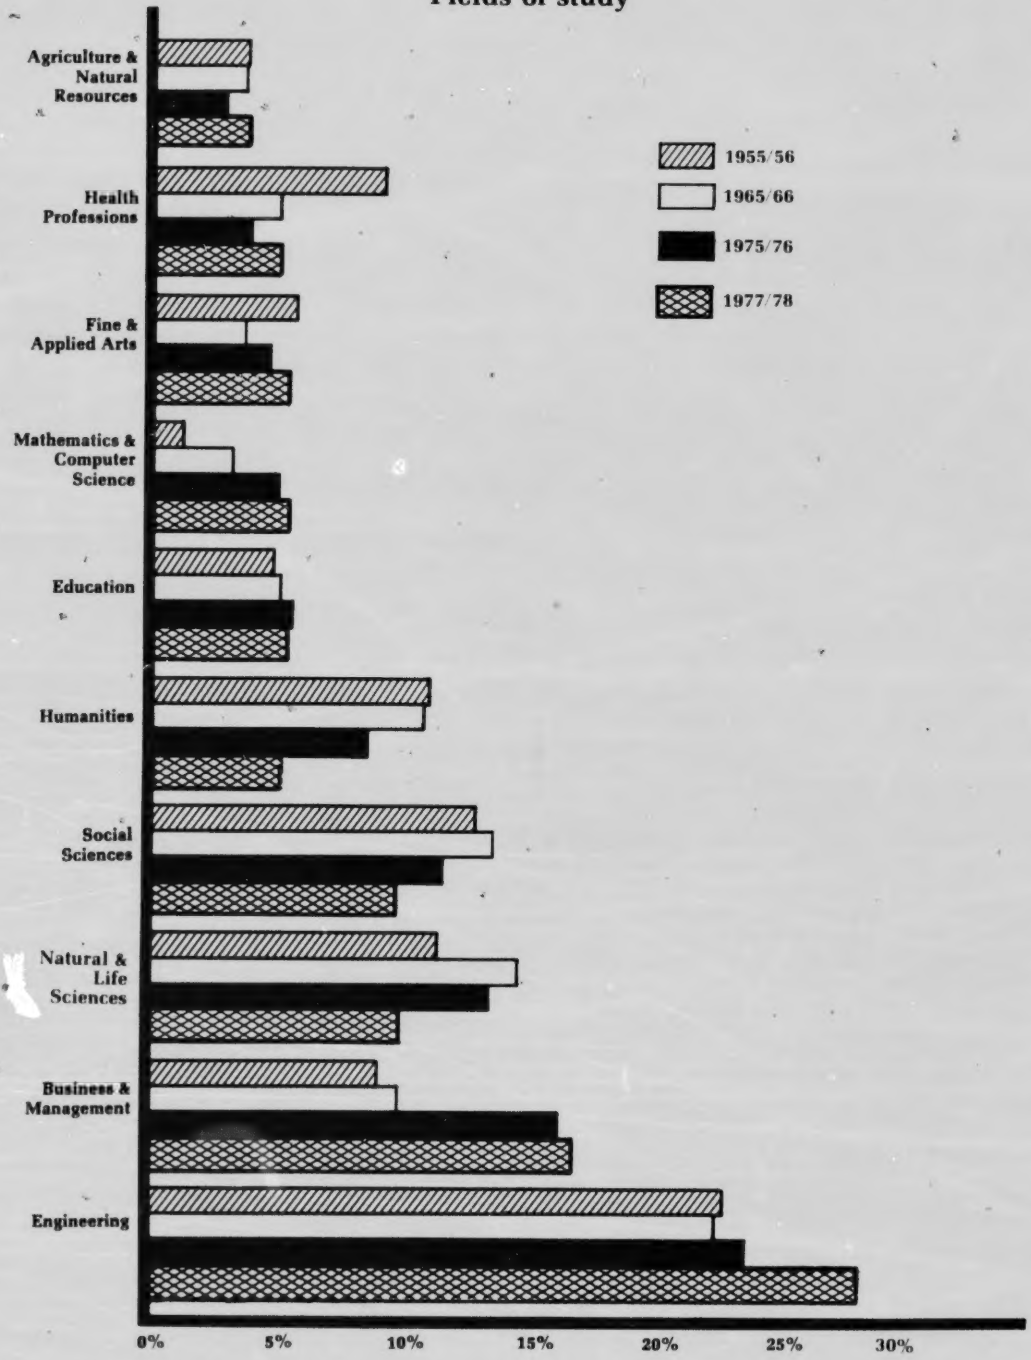
Fields of study



Tables 34 and 35 provide both a summary of and the detailed responses to the OPScan Forms' questions on students' characteristics.

In the last year, about four-fifths of the foreign students reported holding an F visa, an increase from the three-fourths of last year. At the same time, there has been a significant and expected decrease in the number reported as refugees. This decrease is an effect of both the decline in the number of Vietnam refugees who came to this country and the more accurate reporting of Cuban exiles.

Replies to the question about students' primary source of support indicate much greater dependence on personal and family resources and on the students' home governments than on other sources. Two major sources of financial support to decline in the last year were the U.S. government and employment. Institutions reported an almost 50% decrease in the U.S. government as a source of funds, and about a 75% decline in employment, whether on-campus part-time or off-campus work. About 80% of funding is from personal and family, home government, and foreign-private sources, indicating that four-fifths of the foreign students were supported by non-domestic sources. Of the remaining one-fifth, half reported their present major source of support is their U.S. college or university of attendance. The survey did not attempt to determine the actual dollar value of these sources of support nor whether the funding of U.S. colleges and universities was by way of tuition waivers or other forms of non-cash support. Such a survey would have involved an investigation of each student and would, therefore, be inconsistent with the current methodology of this census.

Notes

1. The Base Number of 139,545 represents an actual count of non-immigrant foreign students where country of origin was known. It consists of reports from 1,378 institutions which reported the country of origin for each non-immigrant student.

2. The Extrapolated Count of 235,510 represents an actual count of non-immigrant students which includes both the Base Number of 139,545 and an additional 95,965 for which country was not specifically known. These 95,965 students were reported by 1,097 institutions but were not specified as to country of origin.

3. The Base Number was distributed by country and each country's percentage of the total Base Number was calculated.

4. Extrapolated Counts were arrived at by multiplying the Base Number by a factor of 1.6876 (the Extrapolated Count divided by the Base Number) and rounded to the nearest 10.

5. Part 1 displays, for each country, the Base Number, the Percentage Distribution, and the Extrapolated Count, UNLESS:
   - A. the Base Number for a country was lower than 70 but more than 20, in which case only the Base Number is shown;
   - B. the Base Number for a country was less than 20 in which case that country's total was added to all others of less than 20 and grouped under the appropriate sub-region.

6. Part 2 lists the countries within sub-regions for which the Base Number was less than 20.

APPENDIX 6

Joint Task Force on Data Collection
AACRAO • IIE • NAFSA

October 15, 1977

Dear Colleague:

We wish to inform you about an interassociational project which is designed to reveal important information about foreign student enrollments in United States colleges and universities. The project is being developed by the Joint Task Force on Data Collection which consists of representatives from AACRAO, IIE, and NAFSA. The Task Force has been created to 1) aid institutions with the collection and reporting of foreign student enrollment information, and 2) to centralize foreign student data for governmental and private agencies who have interests and responsibilities in foreign student exchange programs.

The purpose of this letter is to urge you to assist your campus reporting representative with the task of accumulating and recording the data. We are contacting the person at your institution who has normally reported foreign student enrollment census data. A copy of the attached form on which the data is to be reported has also been sent to the campus reporting representative.

In the next annual census of foreign students, limited information will be requested from colleges and universities which will give total numbers of foreign students by the following categories: female and male, sources of funds, full-time, fields of study, number enrolled, F (student) and J (exchange visitor) visa holders, marital status, level of program pursued (e.g., graduate, and countries of origin).

Some colleges and universities already collect this information and can readily provide it. Others may wish to adopt the enclosed foreign student basic information form. The requested information should be collected and maintained for each individual student for use in your institution, as provided by the "Buckley Amendment". Confidentiality of information is protected as only summary information will be requested by the Joint Task Force. (This treatment is in accord with an official ruling we have received from the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) office, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare). It is suggested that this form originate in the office(s) which admits foreign students as much of the information can be provided from the student's application. From the time the student matriculates, the record should be maintained by the most appropriate institutional official. In many cases, this will be the foreign student adviser.

As a large base of information is developed by institutions throughout the United States, further information will be requested about the foreign student population. Some additional information requested may include: mode of entrance, degrees completed, basis of determining English proficiency, and alumni information (e.g., plans after graduation).

The manner in which information is kept is far less important than the fact that the information is available. The suggested form may be reproduced or altered to suit the convenience of each institution.

Thank you for your assistance and your cooperation in this very important endeavor.

Sincerely,

Stan Berry

INSTRUCTIONS

1978 COLLECTION

The survey of foreign students is divided into four steps, each of which provides different information and each of which requires different levels of response.

The First Step is to collect information about the total number of foreign students enrolled at your institution. A simple postcard response is all that is required but it is required from all institutions if the overall picture is to be accurate.

The Second Step is to report the number of students by country of citizenship.

The Third Step is a generalized picture of the foreign student population in respect to certain additional characteristics such as funding sources, etc.

The Fourth Step is a breakdown of students enrolled by academic field of study.

REPORT THE INFORMATION THAT YOU HAVE OR THAT YOU CAN REASONABLY OBTAIN BY THE DEADLINE.

This may only be the total foreign students. Estimates are accepted. Any information you can report is important so that information concerning your institution can be appropriately reflected in the reports which will be compiled and distributed nationally.

HANDLING OF THE OPTICAL SCANNING FORM

When filling out these reports, use only a No. 2 lead pencil. Do not make stray marks on these forms, staple them, place gummed labels on them or do anything that would interfere with the machine readability of the forms. Please PRINT or TYPE the name of the institution, your name and the date on all pages of the form.

HOW TO FILL OUT THE OPTICAL SCANNING FORM

When filling out the forms, write in the appropriate number in each of the blank boxes provided at the top of the column. Then "grid" in the appropriate preprinted number beneath each box by making a horizontal line through that number. Numbers should be right justified with leading zeroes. Example: for Total Foreign Students of ten (10) you would write and code 0010; if six were males, you would write and code 0006.

INCLUDE ONLY FOREIGN STUDENTS AT THE POST-SECONDARY LEVEL

Step 1: Please fill out the "Survey Reply Card" indicating foreign student (non-immigrant) enrollment at your institution for the 1977-78 fall term.

Deadline for receipt of this information is November 1, 1977.

Step 2: Please provide the country of citizenship for each foreign student enrolled.

Please use the "Foreign Student Enrollment by Country of Citizenship" form. This form simply requests a numerical breakdown of foreign students.

Step 3: Complete the "Foreign Student Activity Report" form.

Please fill in the information requested in the seven categories indicating whether the count is actual or estimated.

Step 4: Complete the "Foreign Student Enrollment by Academic Area Form".

The Scope of this Survey is to obtain the number of foreign students (see definition) enrolled at the post-secondary level at your institution by academic area. The academic area categories to be used are those listed in the 1976-77 edition of Education Directory published by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

THERE IS A BRIEF DEFINITION/EXPLANATION OF EACH ITEM BELOW.

ALL INFORMATION SHOULD BE BASED ON FALL TERM, 1977 ENROLLMENT STATUS UNLESS OTHERWISE INDICATED

1. TOTAL FOREIGN STUDENTS - a foreign student is anyone who is enrolled for courses in the United States who is not a citizen or an immigrant (permanent resident). Refugees are included.

2. MALES - number of male foreign students enrolled at your institution. Females will be derived by subtracting the number of males from total foreign students.

3. VISA TYPE/REFUGEE - the count of foreign students with temporary visas enrolled at your institution by the type of visa they hold, and the count of refugees enrolled at your institution.

4. PROGRAMS CURRENTLY BEING PURSUED - a count of the foreign students by degree level or type of program who are currently enrolled this fall term.

5. PRIMARY SOURCE OF FUNDS - the single greatest source of funds for all educational expenses including associated living expenses for a foreign student enrolled in an educational institution within the United States. If a person had more than one source of funds, then use the source which represents the largest percentage of all income.

   a. Personal and Family - income derived from personal or private sources.
   b. College/University - funds obtained from a U.S. College or University (grants, scholarships, waivers, etc.). This does not include employment at the institution.
   c. Home Government - funds obtained from the government of the student's home country.
   d. U.S. Government - funds obtained from the United States government.
   e. Private Sponsorship Within U.S. - self-explanatory.
   f. Private Sponsorship Foreign - self-explanatory.
   g. Employment - self-explanatory.
   h. Other - primary source not among those listed.

6. NOT MARRIED - a count of the foreign students at your institution who are not married. The number of married students will be derived by subtracting the not married count from the total count of foreign students.

7. FULL TIME STUDENT - the total number of foreign students who are attending classes full time. Use your institution's definition of full time. Part time students will be derived by subtracting the count of full time students from the total count of foreign students.

FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY - do not write in this area.

CEEB CODE OF YOUR INSTITUTION - Please write in and code the College Entrance Examination Board (CEEB) Code for your institution on ALL forms.
